

Q. What is the Texas Wind Energy Clearinghouse?

A. *The Clearinghouse is a member-driven network of diverse stakeholders across Texas engaged in the multi-faceted wind energy industry: metropolitan & rural local governments (cities, counties, school districts), colleges & universities, heavy industry, small business, harbors & railroads, ranchers & farmers), chambers of commerce & economic development corporations, utilities, wind energy companies, construction companies, and many more.

Q. What can it do for me?

A. *The Clearinghouse organizes & participates in many conferences across Texas, the USA & internationally every year, representing the interests of Texas stakeholders in the supply chain and the comprehensive wind energy industry. The Clearinghouse is a “go-to” resource for wind energy development, supply chain opportunities, community strategies, communications, infrastructure development, and grassroots matters.

Q. How does it interact with other Texas institutions, wind energy groups, and green energy entities?

A. *The Clearinghouse works closely with the various elements of the State of Texas, the university & college systems, communities, landowners, and multiple advocacy groups & industry coalitions. The Clearinghouse is a connection between the wind fields & the retail markets, industry & communities, landowners & developers, media & the region, and other stakeholder combinations.

Q. How do I join?

A. *The annual investment for major metropolitan areas, heavy industry, and wind energy companies is $1,000 per year. For smaller businesses that want a featured role, the annual investment is $500. There are lower annual investments for smaller communities, small business, regional colleges, etc. The membership form is online at www.TexasWindClearinghouse.us.

Q. How can I find out more?
